NEW WORLD WHITE WINES

“New World” means everything else besides Europe and refers to some generalities about what you can expect from your wine. With warmer climates, the grapes are able to ripen to a greater degree. Uninhibited by millenniums of tradition, the New World is innovative in their wine growing and wine making techniques. These wines are often labeled by grape instead of region unlike the Old World.

OLD WORLD WHITE WINES

“Old World” means everything European, but the term conveys so much more about what you’re drinking. With a cooler climate than the rest of the wine world, these wines tend to have more acid and are driven by “terroir” or a sense of place which is one reason why they are typically labeled by region instead of grape.

Generally, wines from each region are meant to be paired with food from the area.

FRANCE

Burgundy “Bourgogne” in French, is the birthplace and homeland of Chardonnay and Pinot Noir located in North-East France. The 110,000 vineyards are broken up into 5 major regions: Chablis (furthest North), Côte d’Or (Further divided into Côte de Beaune and Côte de Nuits), Côte Chalonnaise, Maconnais and Beaujolais (home of Gamay grape). Each region of France classifies the quality of their wine differently. Burgundy classifies the quality of wine based on the vineyard in which the grapes were grown instead of the producer.

SPAIN/PORTUGAL

The region of Galicia is on Portugal's Northern Border in North-West Spain and encompasses the wine regions of Monterrei, Rías Baixas, Ribeira Sacra, Ribeiro and Valdeorras. While Tempranillo rules Spain in many regions, the not-so-famous grape Mencía is King here in Galicia with numerous indigenous grapes that are often all grown together and made into field blends.

Each region of France classifies the quality of their wine differently. Burgundy classifies the quality of wine based on the vineyard in which the grapes were grown instead of the producer. You will notice the bottles of wine from Burgundy are labeled accordingly with the most prominent part of the label being the region where the grapes were grown. When assessing the value of the wine, the region and vineyard are the most important aspects. Generally, the more specific the region the higher the quality.

BEAUJOLAIS

You might have tried Beaujolais Nouveau before- the slightly spritzy and sweet guzzling wine. However, we are talking about Cru Beaujolais (AKA “Bo-jo”), the southernmost region in Burgundy, France. In this area of Beaujolais there are 10 cities, or “crus” where the best grapes (gamay) are grown, and depending on the cru of origin the wine changes personality so drastically that it is sometimes hard to believe it’s the same grape.

BORDEAUX

The region of Bordeaux, France is situated in the South-West of France on the Atlantic Coast along the banks of the Gironde River. There are 5 primary grapes of Bordeaux: Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Malbec and Petit Verdot (with Carménère making a comeback after a 200 year sabbatical). Along the right bank of the river there is a higher concentration of clay in the soil. Clay retains more moisture so it is best suited to grow Merlot based wines. The primary regions of the right bank of Bordeaux are: Saint-Émilion, Pomerol and Fronsac. Along the left bank of the river there is a higher concentration of gravel and rock, which has better drainage so it is most suitable to growing Cabernet Sauvignon based wines. The left bank of Bordeaux is separated into 2 major areas: Médoc (to the North) and Graves (to the South).

RHÔNE VALLEY

The Rhône Valley: There is no other region in the world that is as schizophrenic as the Rhône Valley which is split into 2 major areas: Northern Rhône and Southern Rhône. Northern Rhône is situated along the banks of the Rhône river and focuses on only 1 red (Syrah) and 3 white grapes (Viognier, Roussanne and Marsanne). Syrah from Northern Rhône is the gold standard to which all other Syrah is measured and is sometimes co-fermented with the white grapes grown in the region. Southern Rhône is spread out over a large area with a very different Mediterranean (vs. Continental) climate. The king of Southern Rhône is Grenache which is almost always blended with Syrah, Mourvèdre, Cinsault or the many other grapes (red and white) grown in the area.

NEW WORLD RED WINES

“New World” means everything else besides Europe and refers to some generalities about what you can expect from your wine. With warmer climates, the grapes are able to ripen to a greater degree, meaning the fruit is going to drive the “flavor bus.” Uninhibited by millenniums of tradition, the New World is innovative in their wine growing and wine making techniques.
